For more fun activities and crafts for kids, see: Kids CraftsHoliday CraftsKids Activities Nine Men's Morris was one of the most popular May Day games in England. Now you can learn how to make and play this fun game. What you'll need: Large Square Cardboard Advertisement Marker 9 Black Stones 9 White Stones Coin Copy the Morris board (as seen in the illustration) on a piece of cardboard. Each player starts with nine stones of one color. Flip a coin to see who moves first. Take a time by placing the stones on the points on the morris board one at a time. You can put a stone in any vacant spot. The goal is to make a mill - three of your stones together in any line. Every time you make a mill you get to take one of your opponent's pieces. If your opponent forms a mill, they can take one of yours. Parts in a mill are safe. When all the stones have been placed on the board, the goal is to create new power plants by moving the stones. A stone can be moved a space along any line, but there can be a stone already sitting at the point where you move. The game ends when a player has only two pieces remaining or when a player is unable to move. Hawaiians celebrate May Day by making and exchanging various floral crafts.
